

LUIGI MICHELETTI AWARD 2007

The Micheletti Award for the most promising technical or industrial museum among the current year's candidates goes to “Brunel's ss Great Britain” in Bristol, U.K. This project was judged to be an outstanding achievement by a privately financed Trust. The daring decision to bring a rusting hulk from the Falkland Islands to Bristol, followed by a major study to find the best solution for its preservation was a huge task in itself. The subsequent preservation, reconstruction and interpretation of the vessel has transcended all expectations and with its associated museum telling the story of the ship in reverse time order in historical, cultural and technical terms, visitors are provided with a unique experience. The installation of lifts within the ship's funnel makes accessibility available to all, which is rare aboard a historic ship.
